

NEW APPOINTMENTS

Cargill Cotton

Cargill Cotton has recruited the experienced Ben Montgomery to its team based in Goondiwindi.

Ben, who has spent nearly nine years in the cotton industry, said he was thrilled to be returning to the industry in Goondiwindi.

Originally from Talwood, Ben has worked from the farm through to the merchandising of the raw product and played active roles in community programs. "I'm looking forward to being back in the field with the growers, I guess in the midst of all the activity," he said.

Ben will join Phil Sloan, Cargill Cotton Growers Services Manager who has been flying the Cargill Cotton banner from Goondiwindi for the past four years.

Rodney Lord, who has been based in Moree for Cargill for the past three years, has resigned to take up a hands-on management role in a stationery business on the north coast.

For further information please call Phil Sloan 07 4671 0222. 📞

Australian Classing Services

Australia's largest independent cotton classing facility, Australian Classing Services (ACS) has named cotton industry veteran Peter Bunce to replace General Manager Nicholas Mahony.

Peter, who has been involved in the cotton industry for 10 years, takes over the reins of General Manager this month.

Peter said he was looking forward to applying some of the insight and skills from his background in business, marketing, classing and farming.

Peter graduated from the prestigious American Cotton Shippers' Association Cotton School at Rhodes College in 1999 as a USDA qualified classer. He has been cotton classing for six years and has worked with ACS since its inauguration in 2003. He also has a background in farming in the Moree region, and holds a Bachelor of Business and Commerce, majoring in marketing, from the University of New England. 📞
