

Macquarie Cotton announces grower service team

Macquarie Cotton Australia, a division of Macquarie Bank Limited, has announced its regional representatives to service cotton growers across the Australian cotton industry.

- Kevin Schwager of Priag Marketing Pty Limited will represent Macquarie Cotton Australia in the Namoi Valley, Walgett and Bourke as well as select growers in other regions.
- Karl Sinclair of Agfarm Marketing Commodities Pty Limited will handle clients in the Macquarie and Lachlan Valley regions.
- David Orr of David Orr Agencies Pty Limited will cover the Gwydir, Macintyre and western Queensland regions including St George and Dirrinbandi.
- Richard Merson of Link Ag will represent Macquarie Cotton Australia across the Darling Downs and Central Queensland regions.

“We are pleased to have secured the services of a very experienced agency network to provide a first point of contact with growers in all cotton areas,” said Kim Morison, Division Director, Macquarie Cotton Australia.

“All of our representatives are professionals in agricultural commodity marketing with many long standing relationships with farmers in their respective regions,” he said.

“Our agency network offers an innovative, competitive and reliable cotton marketing service to Australian cotton growers.”

Macquarie Cotton Australia was formed in December 2003, to purchase cotton direct from Australian cotton growers and export to international markets, predominantly across the Asian region.

Macquarie Cotton Australia is a key component of Macquarie’s global agricultural commodity business.
